Labor and Employment Law

OVERVIEW

Labor and Employment Law governs the relationship between employers and employees. As a general rule, labor and employment lawyers either represent employers/management or employees/unions. A labor and employment practice encompasses four key specialties: (1) counseling clients in compliance with employment-related statutes and common law, on issues including workplace safety and health, union activity, equal employment opportunity, family and medical leave, and wage and hour laws; (2) employment disputes and litigation on behalf of employers or employees; (3) ERISA and employee benefits; and (4) labor relations, assisting either management or labor union clients in all aspects of collective bargaining, grievance and arbitration processes, and litigation.

This handout helps you plan your path to a labor and employment law career, covering essential competencies for clients and legal employers. As you plan, ensure you incorporate all three sides of this triangle.<sup>1</sup>

The left side emphasizes Client - Centered Relational Skills and Problem-Solving. This entails responsiveness to clients, a deep understanding of the client's needs, creative problem solving, and client-centered communication.

The right side centers on Ownership of Professional Development Competencies. Employers and clients require teamwork, a strong work ethic, an entrepreneurial mindset, determination, attention to detail, integrity, and effective project management skills.

The base comprises fundamental Technical Competencies, including knowledge of the law, legal analysis, legal research, communication in the legal context, and legal judgment.
