

Dear Faculty and Staff:

SMU is rooted in the Christian tradition of Methodism and celebrates religious belief and practice that nourish the life of the mind and spirit. As spring unfolds, many religions observe holy days that bring the community of faith together. In this season, we remind you of the University's religious observance policy and religious holy days taking place in the Spring semester.

Students who need to miss class for religious observance are expected to notify faculty in advance of their absence and are required to make up any missed work. While students are expected to notify faculty at the beginning of the term if they will need an adjustment to assignment dates or exams, we would encourage faculty to work with students throughout the semester to make proper arrangements for accessing course materials and making up missed work in a timely manner.

Faculty should anticipate requests from students observing the following holy days:

- Islam:
 - Ramadan:
 - The anticipated dates for Ramadan are March 10-April 9, culminating with the Eid-al-Fitr holiday on April 9. These dates are based on the sighting of the moon and may shift by one day (earlier or later).
 - During the blessed month of Ramadan, observant Muslims fast from dawn to dusk, abstaining from food and beverages (even water). Observant Muslims eat a substantial meal (suhoor) before dawn and break the fast (iftar) with a feast at sunset.
 - Late afternoon classes and tests may be challenging for students who are fasting.
 - The final ten days (March 31-April 9) of Ramadan are the most auspicious days. During this time, following the iftar meal, many observant Muslims pray and recite the Quran late into the evening with their religious community. Early morning classes and tests may be challenging for students who participate in these rituals.
 - Eid-al-Fitr
 - Eid-al-Fitr is expected to begin at sundown on April 8 – and families will be celebrating the full day of feasting on April 9. The exact date is determined by the sighting of the moon in the last days of Ramadan. Student may request to be excused from class on April 9 to ensure that they can celebrate the holiday with family.

- Christianity:
 - Good Friday/Easter
 - Most Western Christian traditions will be celebrating Good Friday on March 29 and Easter on March 31.
 - Orthodox (Eastern) Christians will be celebrating Good Friday on May 3 and Easter on May 5.
 - You can anticipate requests from Orthodox students who plan to attend services on Good Friday, which may take place throughout the day. Please note that this year, Good Friday (Orthodox) is an exam day, and you may receive a request to reschedule an exam.
- Judaism:
 - Passover:
 - The Jewish community is celebrating Passover April 22-30.
 - This year, the first two nights of the Passover Seder celebration fall on Monday and Tuesday nights, April 22 and 23. The Jewish community observes April 23 and 24 and April 29 and 30 as holy days, which traditionally one would be unable to attend class or go to work.
 - You may receive requests for excused absences on April 23, 24, 29 and 30.

Thank you for your commitment to support holistic student growth that nurtures the mind, body and spirit. Each religious tradition is diverse, and the summary above does not speak to every variation you may encounter. If you have questions or need additional information, please contact the Rev. Lisa Garvin, Chaplain and Minister to the University or the Office of the Chaplain and Religious Life at chaplain@smu.edu.
